

Crescent Bridge Canyon

Because of the natural bridge in this canyon, I'm not giving its location; you'll have to discover it on your own.

Entering the first short section of narrows in Crescent Bridge Canyon:

The canyon widens a little further ahead, then narrows back down sharply:

Crescent Bridge:

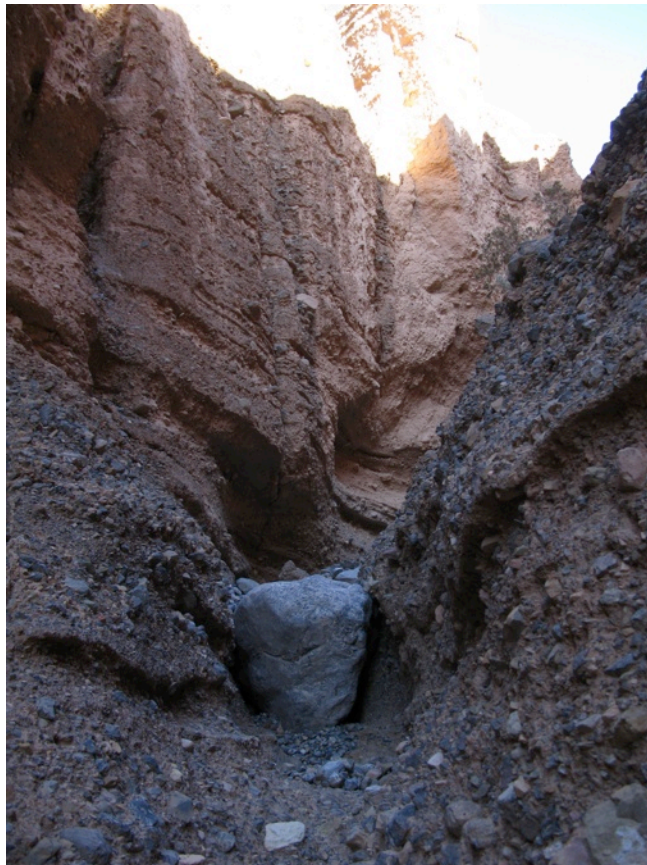

Continuing up-canyon through some incredible narrows:

There is a small boulder stuck in the canyon, which is easy to climb:

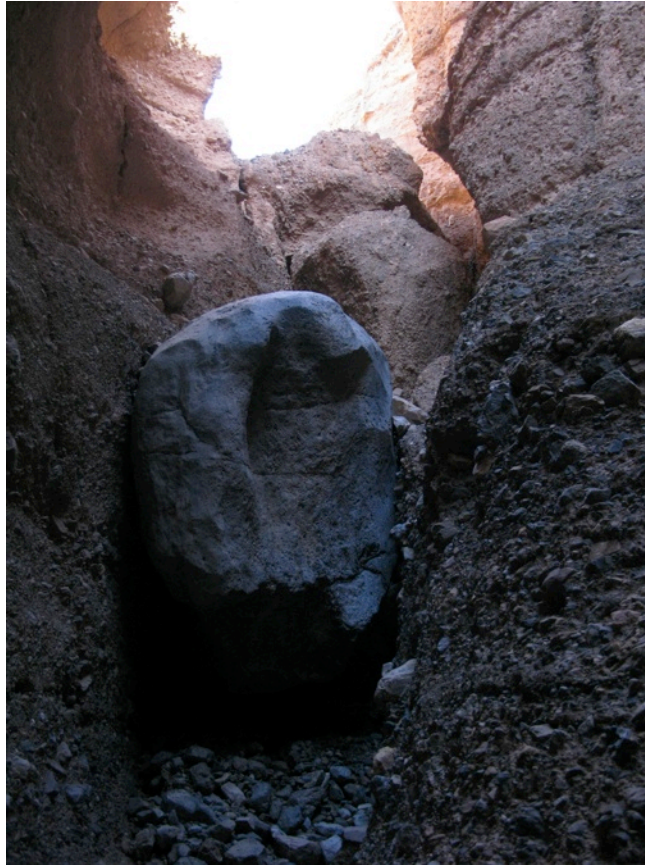

There are some more narrows:

Mud drippings on a wall of the canyon:

Finally, we reach an impasse. Although the top of the boulder is only about 10 feet off the floor of the wash, we decide not to attempt to climb around the right side of it due to the crumbly nature of the surrounding walls:

We turn around and head back down the canyon. More narrows photos from the return trip:

